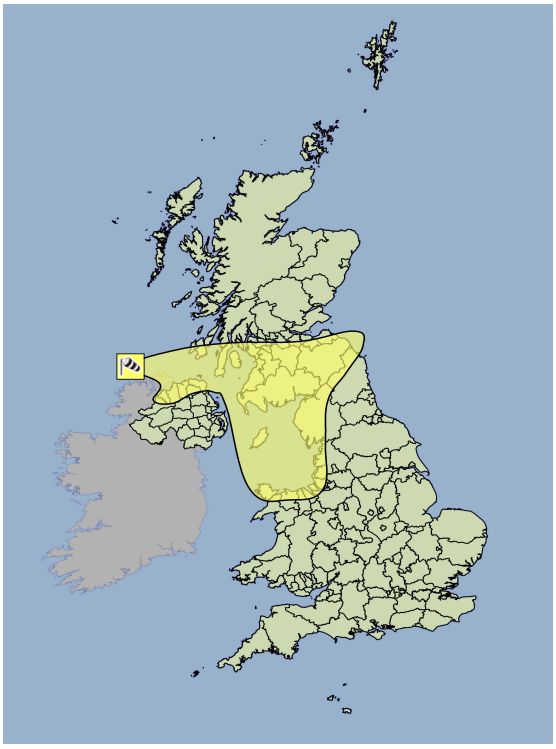
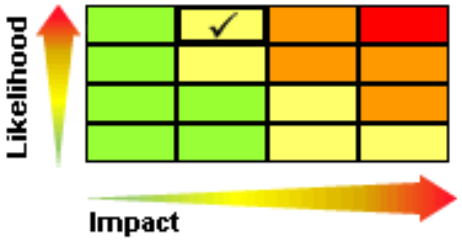
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deep area of low pressure is developing to the north of Scotland and the associated frontal system is moving southeast across the UK bringing strong to gale force winds accompanied by gusts of 50-60 mph as well as some locally heavy rain. The main swathe of strongest winds and heavy rain will gradually move away as the frontal system clears southeastwards through today, before strengthening winds accompanied by blustery showers reach parts of Northern Ireland later today.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 12:00 on Sun, 15th Sep 2013 until 23:59 on Sun, 15th Sep 2013

Winds have now decreased across the northern half of Scotland. However, gale force westerly winds will continue to affect parts of southern Scotland, the north of Northern Ireland, northern England and North Wales at times through the rest of today. Winds will tend to decrease through today as drier conditions arrive from the northwest but will strengthen again later today across parts of Northern Ireland and southwest Scotland as heavy blustery showers arrive from the west.

The public should be aware of the potential for some minor disruption to travel.

This is an update to the Warning issued on Saturday.
